ROLE OF PARENTS IN DEVELOPING LIFE SKILLS

Researchers say that no amount of formal education can compare to the influence of parents who teach every day by their words and actions. Parents must realize that they have the primary responsibility for their child's education. Education begins with family. Parents have a pivotal role in the overall development of the child. So awareness about life skills is essential for bringing up a child as a successful and happy individual.

- Focus on the child's strength.
- Set reasonable expectations.
- Maintain consistence discipline.
- Develop reading habits.
- Playing with children.
- Spend time with their children sharing or teaching something.
- Become part of project their ward received from the school.
- Request meeting with your child's teacher frequently, be open and transparent with them.
- Listen to your child's feelings.
- Reinforce your child's ability to cope.
- Encourage your child to use their mind.
- Imbibe required attitude and values.
- Teach them to manage social situations.
- Help your child in developing positive self-image or perception.
- Help them to manage time productively and staying organized.
